

New 'Bloom' mixes function and aesthetics

THERE'S a new division for sustainable homes at Thompson Building Group, called Thompson Sustainable Homes, and their first offering is the Bloom, aimed at first home buyers and investors with a price tag of just $149,950.

This contemporary house plan was designed to explore the latest concepts in lifestyle, based on green design.

Bloom mixes function and aesthetics with simplistic, easy-to-build form.

Open floor plan, high ceilings, single floor living, and urban design concepts are just some of the ideas expressed by this house plan.

New houses, townhouses and major renovations must now achieve five-star (out of 10) energy equivalence rating. This came into effect on March 1, 2009 (www.dip.qld.gov.au).

Thompson Sustainable Home "Bloom" has 9.5 stars.

Sustainability is about taking what we need to live now, without jeopardising the potential for people in the future to meet their needs.

A Thompson Sustainable Home incorporates a design philosophy where the main focuses are:

- Increasing the efficiency of resources such as water, energy and materials
- Ensuring the home is "healthy" to humans and the environment during its lifecycle
- Minimising pollution and damage to the ecology of our planet

A Thompson Sustainable Home offers:

- 9.5-star energy-efficiency rating – the average home is rated only five stars.

To achieve this we use:

- Security of owning your own home
- Lightweight materials
- Reduced carbon footprint
- Stylish and modern design
- Affordability
- Family friendly design
- Recycled building product
